ABOUT MENTORSHIP

Being asked to serve as a mentor is a request I receive graciously and with great humility. It is an honor to be considered. In spite of my warm feelings and desire to fulfill those requests, the number of requests and other commitments require that I avoid accepting additional mentees on a personal level. I consider my ministry of serving others to be a form of mentoring. Available to all are a growing number of platforms that share my message, a message that I share around the world. Much of what I have learned and benefitted from during decades of community service and over twenty years of speaking and writing is available completely free of charge. Also, I respond to feedback when time and opportunity allows, which establishes an informal mentor-mentee relationship.

If you have landed on this page because of your interest in a mentor-mentee relationship, I thank you profusely. I ask that you develop the habit of visiting my web sites, blogs, or my Facebook Page. These sources will reveal much more about my ideas and ideals than you would be able to obtain from the limited personal time I could share. Links to some resources currently available are shown at the bottom of this page.
